Hygiene Protective Shields

Protecting your employees in a modified workplace

Schiavello has designed a series of protective shields as a control measure to reduce the risk of infection in your workspace when the specified social distance cannot be met.

The protective panels have been designed for use in high density workplaces and call centres, as well as retail and public service facilities. All panels can be designed to size as a retro-fit solution to suite your space and are relocatable for ongoing flexibility. Manufactured using a selection of non-porous durable materials with antibacterial properties, ensures they can effectively block particles from sneezing and coughing and can be easily cleaned.

The Schiavello range of protective shields have been certified by an independent Occupational Hygienist to guarantee the highest level of safety for your employees and clients.

National Client Project

Schiavello has recently installed a range of Hygiene Protective Shields within a national call centre environment as well as face-to-face venues to protect both employees and clients.

The offices across the country were fitted with snowflake (120° workstations which are arranged in five different configurations. The snowflake pod of six was identified as not meeting the social distancing requirements. As a result, Schiavello developed a High Density Workspace Divider made of laminated board and glass to be placed between the two pairs of workstation as well as added Hygiene Protection Screens made of polycarbonate fitted to the workstation sides. The side screens were fitted to move with the workstation to be elevated if the worker prefers to stand.

In addition to the above Schiavello developed polycarbonate Hygiene Protective Screens fitted to the front of 7,000 customer service workstations and check-ins.
